PEORIA GIRL'S SLAYER CAPTURED: CONFESSES

WALEY WOMAN DENIED PLEA OF GUILTY IN COURT

Federal Judge Rejects Admission; Sends Husband to Prison

Tacoma, Wash., June 22.—(AP)—Despite Mrs. Margaret Waley's insistence that she be permitted to plead guilty to the "Lindbergh kidnaping of George Weyerhaeuser, Federal Judge E. E. Cushman today once more refused to accept her plea and directed the entry of a former "not guilty" plea.

He immediately appointed John F. Dore, former Seattle mayor, as her trial attorney.

Judge Cushman then set Monday for fixing the trial date.

The 19-year-old wife of Harmon M. Waley, who yesterday was sentenced to 45 years on a guilty plea, began weeping and whispered to Owen P. Hughes, Assistant United States Attorney.

Doesn't Want Trial.

Hughes informed the court the girl wished to make a statement. Judge Cushman ruled she could speak only through Stephen J. O'Brien, appointed to represent Dore. O'Brien explained to the court Mrs. Waley did not want to stand trial, but that he felt it was his duty to have her tried in her own best interests.

Judge Cushman assured O'Brien "you are doing your full duty as I understand it."

O'Brien previously had told the court that after talking with Mrs. Waley nearly an hour this morning

MOTHER'S REACTION

Tacoma, June 22.—(AP)—The reactions of a mother to the punishment meted out to kidnapers who abducted her child and held him captive for eight days before releasing him, are not to be put into words. She wants to forget the horror of those days her son was missing.

This was made clear by Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, Jr., today when she declined to make any comment upon the 45 year prison sentence given Harmon M. Waley, 24 year old convict, for the abduction of 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser.

ing and studying the indictment "in my opinion she could not be convicted if she went to trial."

"No Proof of Guilt."

"I have found nothing that could convict her," he said. "I think a trial would be the best thing, after talking with her husband."

"She was completely dominated by him and knew nothing of the kidnaping until two days after the boy was kidnaped when she heard him in the car."

Judge Cushman asked O'Brien if he had considered entering the plea of nolle contendere (refusing to plea guilty or not guilty) and merely standing mute when arraigned.

O'Brien said he had, but "I believe it is best to go to trial."

Mrs. Waley had come into court, eyes red and puffed from weeping. When O'Brien assured the court she insisted on pleading guilty, despite his and her relatives' advice, she gripped the arms of her chair and burst into tears.

Husband to Prison.

She thought over her situation through the lonely hours last night and early today in the fortress-like county jail at Olympia while her 24-year-old ex-convict husband, Harmon, began serving a 15 year sentence in nearby McNeil island federal penitentiary.

It was the first of what may be a lifetime of nights apart. They had been held in separate cells, but under the same roofs, ever since their arrest June 8 and 9 in Salt Lake City where Margaret's spending spree with ransom money led to their capture.

She faced all the unfamiliar matters of court procedure today, with all strange faces around her and no grinning, sneering, self-confident husband nearby to signal her what to say and what not to say.

Husband Pleads Guilty.

Waley was immediately sentenced and taken to prison after he pleaded guilty under the Lindbergh kidnap law yesterday. He also received a two year concurrent sentence for plotting the abduction with the fugitive William Dainard, alias William Mahan.

Margaret pleaded guilty two yesterday, but Judge Cushman refused to accept the plea after her attorney asked leniency on the

Paper's Backbone

New York, June 22.—(AP)—Frank W. Spaeth, manager of the sales promotion division of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, announced today in the association's annual analysis of publicity expenses that in 1934 department stores throughout the country spent two-thirds of their advertising appropriation in newspapers.

"As every retailer knows," Spaeth said, "newspapers remain the backbone plus of the retail publicity appropriation."

The report gave the following distribution of the 1934 retail publicity dollar: newspaper, 66 cents; production, 4 cents; miscellaneous media, 5 cents; radio, 2 cents; direct mail, 2 cents; payroll, 8 cents; total display, 10 cents; all other 3 cents.

CLIPPER PLANE NEARS BASE ON RETURN FLIGHT

Flies Far Above Pacific Against Strong Headwinds Today

Alameda, Calif., June 22.—(AP)—The Pan-American Clipper, flying again for Hawaii to California, was only 1,027 miles from her base here at 7 A. M. (9 A. M. Central Standard time) today.

On the fourth of her series of trail-blazing trans-Pacific flights, the craft was cutting some 300 miles north of the Great Circle route regularly followed by ocean vessels.

Despite the buffeting of headwinds she was maintaining speed of 140 miles an hour and was keeping to the schedule which will bring her home about 1 P. M. (3 P. M. Central Standard time.)

For a thousand miles the Clipper had not sighted the rolling Pacific, far beneath. She was flying over a solid bank of clouds which at one time forced her to an elevation of 14,000 feet.

Later, however, the Clipper's crew brought her down to 7,000 feet "to keep warm."

At 1 A. M. Pan American Airlines wrote another entry into the log of its pioneering development. The new radio compass station established at Wake Island sent its first message, flashing a bearing to the Clipper.

Senate Liberals Start Movement to Keep Congress in Session all Summer, if Necessary, to 'Soak Rich'

Washington, June 22.—(AP)—Borrowing a text from the French revolution, Senator Long (D-La.) jumped today into a fresh fight to force immediate tax-the-rich legislation whether or not President Roosevelt desires action in that direction at this session.

"No enemies to the left!" was the topic Long chose for a speech from the senate floor today on Roosevelt's message calling for taxes to break up great fortunes and cut down large incomes. Long said the phrase was used by Danton and Robespierre, leaders in the French revolution, and meant they could go as far left as anyone.

LEGISLATURE IS FACING CLOSING JAM—CUSTOMARY

Will Have to Work Overtime Next Week to Clean Calendars

Springfield, Ill., June 22.—(AP)—The customary closing jam, keeping the 59th general assembly in session until the July 1 adjournment deadline, today found many of the major issues still facing rollcalls.

All hope for a last week recess was abandoned. Facing day and night sessions, the house will return to work Monday evening and the senate Tuesday morning.

Some of the biggest bills have yet to pass.

Of major importance to the Horner administration are the bills extending for 19 months the life of and appropriating $45,000,000 to the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission. With Republicans ready to protest and not all the Democrats present, administration leaders didn't take a chance on calling them for final house passage yesterday.

Concurrence in the power exemption to the controversial three percent utility tax bill, through which additional relief funds are to be raised, must be voted by the senate.

ALLEN KILLS BILL

Springfield, Ill., June 22.—(AP)—A bill changing the date for making assessments of personal property from April 1 to January 1 was killed in the House of Representatives Friday after Henry C. Allen, Lyn-don Republican, led a fight against it in behalf of agricultural interests.

The bill, Allen contended, would double the average farmer's personal property assessment as January would find him with "a peak load of feed-er cattle, cribbed corn and other crops" while the present April 1 assessment date finds him with "an average load of personal property."

Council Votes Fund for Fifth St. Improvement

The meeting of the city council last evening was brief. Bills against the city were ordered paid and a soft drink license was granted and issued to George A. Campbell. An appropriation of $6,367.20 from the city's share of the gas tax refund from the state was set aside to be used in improving Fifth Street from Highland to Dement Ave., the work to start as soon as the fund is available. The report of City Auditor George Erwin was received and ordered filed.

Pension Fund Unopposed

The $5,000,000 biennial appropriation for old age pensions can be sent to the governor in two days, if the total lack of opposition continues.

The University of Illinois appropriation, following the recommendation of the trustees instead of that of the governor, has been held up in the house and might be the basis of a fight over some $600,000.

Normal school appropriations also have cleared only the senate barrier. There are some departmental and miscellaneous money bills that also have been held up in the traditional closing log-jam.

Ross Porter Clear in Hallmark Probe

(Peoria Journal-Transcript)

In justice to Ross Porter, who was interrogated in connection with the Mildred Hallmark case, The Journal-Transcript desires to emphasize the fact that investigation convinced police officials that he had no knowledge of the matter. Due to a confusion as to his whereabouts he was sought both in Dixon and Kewanee, where he has recently been employed in decorating work by his stepfather, Harold A. Porter. He is said by those who know him to be a young man of good character and the unfortunate connection of his name with the investigation is a matter of regret.

Illinois Chamber of Commerce Has Plan to Collect Sales Tax

Chicago, June 22.—(AP)—A plan for handling the new three percent occupational tax when it becomes effective July 1, was recommended to all Illinois cities in a bulletin issued today by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

The plan was worked out at a downtown conference and given the approval of the Chamber. It provides for the use of tokens on sales from 5 to 15 cents. On larger sales the tax expense would be paid in pennies.

Tokens, to be issued by the state, will be in one and one-half mill denominations.

The chamber's plan calls for a charge of one token on five cent sales, two tokens on sales of six to 10 cents and three tokens on sales of 11 to 15 cents. From 16 to 50 cents one cent would be added for tax expense. Sales from 51 to 83 cents would call for two cents added; 84 cents to $1.16 would call for a three cent charge and four cents would be added to sales of from $1.17 to $1.50, with larger amounts in proportion.

The bulletin recommended that on charge accounts on sales from five to 15 cents, one cent be added as tax expense.

VANDENBERG NOT SATISFIED WITH ROPER STORIES

Michigan Senator Says Leviathan Deal is in President's Lap

Washington, June 22.—(AP)—Chairman Copeland (D-NY) of the senate commerce committee which heard Ewing Y. Mitchell's charges against the commerce department declared today that the accusations were "thin air."

The New Yorker summed up his opinion of the charges of "graft" and "apparent corruption" with the expression:

"Phfft."

But from Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), also a member of the committee, came the comment that the several days of testimony had "placed the Leviathan transaction squarely in the lap of the president."

Mitchell, deposed Assistant Secretary of Commerce, had said that the United States Lines had been relieved of $1,720,000 in penalties when it laid up the liner Leviathan, and that the transaction had

FLOODS SPREAD DESTRUCTION ON SUMMER'S BIRTH

Near-Tornado Winds Also Exact Toll: Texas, Arkansas Hit

By the Associated Press.

Floods and near-tornado winds spread death and destruction through the mid-west today, the first official day of summer.

Texas and Arkansas were hardest hit.

A fourth victim was added to the death list in Arkansas after a tornado which swept the Texarkana region causing property damage of $150,000 in an area two by thirty miles. About 1500 head of livestock were reported drowned.

Four thousand more Arkansas acres were submerged when a crew of 100 abandoned efforts to save a levee on the Arkansas river shore.

Kentucky and Illinois, also heavy losers from spring floods, watched the first day of summer add to the havoc. Torrential rains swelled rivers, swept away bridges, and inundated farm lands in both states.

High winds added one death in North Dakota and lightning took a life in Missouri.

Throughout the rain and wind swept region low temperatures further retarded crops and farmers were hurriedly harvesting in wheat and oat regions between downpours to save part of their grain.

Boggy farmlands made use of machine harvesters virtually impossible and farmers were desperately resorting to antiquated hand-scythe methods.

Braddock Settled

Newark, N. J., June 22.—(AP)—Champion James J. Braddock and the New Jersey emergency relief administration were officially quits today.

The administration announced that its former client, who defeated Max Baer for the world heavyweight title, paid off a note for $367.24 for relief received two weeks before July 1 when it was due.

Braddock, the administration said, appeared to pay off his relief debt when he received an advance to train for the Baer fight. The administration, suggesting that payment might handicap Braddock, offered to accept the fighter's note. This was done.

YOUNG MECHANIC FACE SCRATCHED TELLS OF CRIME

His Diary Tells of Assaults on Sixteen Peoria Women

Peoria, Ill., June 22.—(AP)—Confronted by the torn and bloody clothing of his alleged victim, Gerald Thompson, 25-year-old tool-maker, confessed the police said today, that he ravished Mildred Hallmark, 19, and left her to die in a cemetery roadside ditch. The girl's battered body was found Monday morning.

Acting Chief of Police Fred Nussbaum announced that Thompson had been rushed to the Sangamon county jail at Bloomington to preclude possible violence an hour before his reported confession was made public.

Thompson was taken into custody Thursday night by City Detectives Charles Welty and Glenn Ford on a tip allegedly furnished by someone residing in the same house. He was subjected to questioning for more than 24 hours before the alleged confession. Lie detector tests were reported used to bring admission of guilt.

Recorded 16 Assaults

The police said they found a diary in Thompson's room in which 16 instances of criminal assaults on women were recorded.

Besides the successful attacks, police said the diary recorded unsuccessful attempts to attack 67 other girls.

Thompson had fended questioning coolly, and Nussbaum noted

AN IDEA A DAY
(By Joseph Fort Newton.)

"I HAVE hit upon a new kind of diary," writes a reader, "new to me at least. It is a cross between a diary and a calendar, and I am having a lot of fun with it this year."

"Instead of tearing off a quotation from some ready-made calendar every day, I make one of my own. Each night I jot down some quotation or some thought of my own, which has helped me most."

"A striking sentence, or a line of poetry, from my reading, or something which has flashed out of my own thought or experience, or some unusual event, is put down."

Here are some samples:

Monday—"Why has my motley diary no jokes? Because it is a soliloquy and every man is grave alone." Emerson, at the conclusion of his diary for 1824. Lack of self-motivation makes life too solemn.

Tuesday—"It is seldom danger is so pressing that there is not time enough for reason to do its work. Therefore let us wait its bidding." The old trapper in Fenimore Cooper's "The Prairie."

Wednesday—"I would rather be defeated in a cause that will one day triumph than to triumph in a cause that will one day be defeated." Woodrow Wilson, a bit of ripe wisdom learned from history.

Thursday—"There are not more fools in America than anywhere else—we are all similarly blessed—but in America they are organized." Maude Royden. Organized fools outwits unorganized wisdom.

Friday—"Heaven gives us all our other features, but we make our own mouths." Oliver Wendell Holmes: what an awful job some of us make of it. We make our own voices, too, in a very large measure.

Saturday—"There are saints that make one want to swear; they are so often meager in sympathy and maggoty in mind." James Hinton, who wanted people to make goodness as attractive as evil.

Sunday—"All is of God that is, and is to be; and God is good. Let this suffice—to trust His will who moves to His great ends unthwarted by the ill." Whittier, who worshipped the Eternal Goodness.

Emotional Phobias Tend to Make Cowards of Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Most warnings about keeping a child's life free from fear mean chiefly, "emotional fear," which may become part of character and alter personality. There is another kind, however, that might be termed "intellectual fear" and this is a different story entirely.

A child may have a healthy respect for fire or water or an animal without going into hysterics about any of them. If, however, he has a set phobia toward anything, it is as gone deeper than reason and becomes part of what is known as emotional attitude.

About the best example of intelligent fear in children, I think, is their acceptance of the automobile. There is probably not a child living who runs or screams at the sight of a car, unless he happens to be a bushman's offspring. Yet all children know cars to be more murderous than many of the things they truly fear. For one thing, they do not shock the senses as a thunderstorm does. Even so, if there were a storm every hour of every day in the year, it is still possible that some children would be frightened because of early impressions too deep to be erased. However, there is no doubt that many emotional terrors in time are rationalized and disappear. Children do get over the storms.

Two Views of Darkness

There are two ways of fearing the dark. One is to imagine huge ghosts and goblins; the other is to realize that one may crack his shin in the gloom or fall down stairs. The latter is necessary and won't hurt anybody. All children have to learn respect for fire and heights and deep water. Otherwise they would be in constant danger.

This slant on physical fears may help a little in regard to moral fears or terror of people.

Many children fear their parents emotionally. It seems too bad to say so, but fathers are quite likely to be a bit hard on little folks at times without realizing it.

A good healthy "respect," let us call it, for a parent who represents the law is entirely different from the searing terror that knows no reason. The danger is that all influence is lost, too, for good, and all his power is done. Oh, yes, the child will obey him and go through the motions, but he is left untouched. And later, when he is out on his own, the tendency will be down and not up. This explains why the "hard case"—the youth or girl who suffered too much as children—is too hard to reclaim.

Child Likes Firm Parents

A child need not think his mother or father are marshmallows in order to love them. He is logical enough to want them to have minds of their own and to be called to account by them. This does not interfere with love or confidence or the perfect balance of home life. He knows a certain type of fear toward them, but it is intelligent fear and will do him good rather than harm. He knows that sometimes they punish without full investigation or without looking at his motives when he thinks he has been in the right, but he allows for errors on their part, too. It is really remarkable how unconsciously analytical most children are.

But look out for the "emotional fear." It will make him inferior and a coward. The coward turns into the bully to cover up. It is in early childhood that this may occur. The pity of it is that the parent may be the last one in the world to suspect it.

No use borrowing trouble, but sometimes a little insight is a help.

Party for Miss Trotter Given by Choir

Last evening the choir girls of the Immanuel Lutheran church happily surprised Ethel Trotter with a miscellaneous shower.

Immediately after the choir rehearsal at the church the girls assembled in the parsonage as usual for their business meeting. Mrs. Suechting then played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, at which time little Esther Suechting dressed as a bride, with a pretty, long, white veil and carrying a bouquet of pink roses, descended the stairs and walked directly up to the bride-to-be and presented her with the roses. Following her were Irma and Erwin Suechting. They carried a large white basket which contained the gifts from the choir girls.

After Ethel had opened all her pretty and useful gifts she was ushered into the dining room, where a table had been set for the luncheon. The centerpiece was a large round pink tray, with 12 tall pink tapers which were lighted, representing the 12 girls in the choir, each taper was fastened with a long pink ribbon, with a wish fastened to it for future happiness to the bride-to-be. On the center of the tray was a miniature bride and groom.

Strawberry shortcake, with whipped cream and hot chocolate were served.

Beautiful June Wedding in R. Falls

In a beautiful setting of garden flowers, ferns and palms Thursday afternoon at the Rock Falls Christian church, Jean Adelaide Shifter, the only child of the pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. Harry E. Shifter, exchanged marriage vows with H. Austin Corzett, also of Rock Falls. Relatives, members of the church and friends filled the auditorium, for the ceremony at 3 o'clock.

The bride's father was assisted in reading the double ring service by the Rev. John F. Corpe, of the Rock Falls Congregational church, the bridegroom's pastor. Two selections appropriate to the nuptial event, "At Dawning" by Cadman and "I Love You Truly" by Bond, were sung with sweet expression by Mrs. Olaf Johnson before the service. Miss Lola Gettle was organist and accompanist. She played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin and Mendelssohn's Wedding March for the processional and recessional marches.

At the appointed hour the bridal procession entered from the rear of the church and wended it way up the center aisle to the altar banked with a mass of blossoms. Four ushers led. They were the bridegroom's cousin, Howard Whipple of Chugwater, Wyo., Francis Bristol, Sterling and Lloyd Gieger and Marvin Lutens of Rock Falls. The maid of honor, Miss Dorothy Lane followed, and the bride came on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. At the altar they were met by the groom and his best man George Hunsberger, who approached from the south room with Rev. Corpe.

The lovely bride wore a charming gown of white Spanish lace over ivory satin, made with a full length skirt and jacket. Her white hat was hair braided and all accessories were white. She carried white rosebuds, gladioli and baby's breath in a shower bouquet arrangement. The maid of honor's gown was blue satin in a jacket style trimmed with summer fur, with which she wore a pink hat and carried pink rosebuds and blue delphinium. Pink and blue were the bride's colors. The bride's mother was in a gown of pink cord lace and the groom's mother wore white silk crepe.

Reception in Church

A reception was held in the church parlors immediately after the ceremony. The misses Lois Gross and Sue Gettle served the light refreshments. Decorations in the church auditorium were in charge of the Loyal Workers class and the refreshments supervised by the Loyal Circle, both organizations in the church.

The bride and groom left early in the evening for a honeymoon trip by motor. An Eleanor blue crepe suit with navy and white polka dot trim was the bride's traveling attire. Upon returning they will reside at 410 East Ninth St. Rock Falls, where they have purchased and completely furnished an attractive home.

Mrs. Corzett came to Rock Falls, with her parents when a small girl at the time her father became pastor of the Rock Falls Christian church. She has endeared herself to the church people by her kindly associations with them and is very active with the younger groups in the church. At present she is the pianist for the church. There have been a series of parties in her honor the past few weeks.

Mr. Corzett is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Corzett of Rock Falls. During his high school days he was a splendid athlete and made a record for himself as a member of the Green and Black basketball team. He holds a position with the Bureau Co.

The church and community join in extending hearty best wishes to the newlyweds for happiness and prosperity in the years to come.

WHY IS A CONGRESS

"It is more or less an open secret that the justice department lawyers generally consider the Guffey-Snyder coal bill to be unconstitutional," writes Paul Mallon, Washington news man. "This may be denied now because the White House is pushing the bill energetically in congress."

"But around the department, the right hand men of Attorney General Cummings are freely saying, off the record, that the bill is illegal on three points. Its price-fixing features are definitely monopolistic; its tax provision is coercive and not for the purpose of raising revenue; and anyway the supreme court already has held that coal mining is not interstate commerce."

What kind of a game is this? The president's own legal department regards the bill as unconstitutional, yet the president is demanding its passage by congress. Is this a game of seeing how many unconstitutional measures can be dumped upon the supreme court to test its courage? And its endurance?

If the bill is declared unconstitutional, will the president exhibit temper again and feign surprise?

Is the program to rush a series of unconstitutional measures to the court, enough so every walk of life will be affected, and then point to the court and the constitution as public enemies—in the campaign of 1936?

Is the program to have all these measures on the fire, but held back from final decision as NRA was held back for two years, with prospect of demise of two or aged justices, and to pack the court with a view to this particular legislation?

It has been indicated that the public reaction against the NRA decision was not what was expected in administration circles. The public went ahead with business as usual, unconcerned about the death of this heart of the New Deal.

If the president can force upon the supreme court the Wagner bill, an adverse decision would arouse organized labor; if he can force upon the court the Guffey coal bill, an adverse decision would arouse the coal miners and many of the operators; if he can force upon the court unconstitutional social measures, an adverse decision would arouse the millions of persons who were expectant beneficiaries.

With the backing of such vast groups of disappointed persons, the president could launch the attack upon the court that he had expected to launch at a previous date, if thwarted in his purpose. In the gold case, he didn't need to make the attack, and in the NRA the setting was wrong, because NRA had become a public nuisance and the court only verified the assertion of General Johnson that it was dead as the dodo.

Time was when the congress regarded seriously the question of constitutionality of proposed legislation. Now it wants to get the president off its hands and go home.

CAN WE BELIEVE OUR EYES?

We read in news of the day that two hundred delegates to a congress for unemployment and social insurance marched to the capitol offices of Gov. Phil LaFollette of Wisconsin and demanded justice. Rather a strange manner which the people have of obtaining justice from the friend of the people and the son of the friend of the people and the brother of the friend of the people.

"The crowd assembled and marched into the reception room of the executive office of the governor and demanded an audience," says the news dispatch. "Members of the governor's secretarial staff informed the delegation Mr. LaFollette was too busy to appear."

Is the governor of Wisconsin running out on his crowd?

"The group remained, however, and yelled repeatedly for the governor to appear long enough to hear their views," the item continues. "Victor Peckham, representing striking relief workers at Stoughton, demanded to know, 'if the governor is afraid to face the working men.'"

That's what we all want to know.

"Throughout the noon hour the crowd held forth in the reception room and showed no signs of dispersing," we are informed. "Shouts of 'yellow' and 'Is he afraid to come out?' greeted successive announcements that the governor still was unavailable."

"At 1 p. m. the governor finally sent word that he would see a committee of the group. The committee headed by Hartley, was closeted with the executive for a time and then reappeared to offer the suggestion of a strike."

Are we to look upon a "progressive" leader eventually running after his followers?

The wisdom and strength of the Constitution explain our persistence as a going concern in a world where almost all other democracies have failed.—Bainbridge Colby, one-time secretary of state.

I believe that if there is to be any enduring peace, international measures must be taken to improve condition of the masses.—Kemal Ataturk, president of Turkey.

We are not going to let Huey Long continue to use the Senate as a medium for making himself the Fascist dictator of America.—Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Washington.

From waiting, Duncy grew tired quite a ride. We're going to swing out. "Hey, just what is this all about?" he asked the little Trouble Tots. "You said you'd wake ol' Rip."

"I've waited half an hour or so. I guess you fellows do not know just what to do, or else you are afraid you'll pull a slip."

One Trouble Tot jumped up and cried, "Say, have you really ever tried to think up clever hunches? It is not so easy, son."

"However, I've thought of a plan to wake up yonder lazy man. We will not need your help, but you can stand and watch the fun."

"Be careful, now," said Duncy. "Gee, I know he'll blame it on to me. You see, he's been real kind, and I don't want to play mean tricks."

"He's big enough to spank me around, so, if I am going to hang around, please promise that you will not get me into any fix."

The Trouble Tots just laughed. One cried, "We'll merely give him

Modernized for "Community Value"

The two photographs show how an outmoded Montclair (N. J.) house was transformed into an up-to-date residence. The property was placed on exhibition immediately following completion of the repair work and was sold within five days. While the work was not financed under the modernization credit plan, it is a graphic example of the "sales appeal" produced by intelligent modernization. New paint, removal of the outmoded porch, landscaping, the inclusion of a side porch, and general repairs to the interior transformed a "dead" property into a much-desired structure. Several persons attempted to purchase the house soon after it was placed on exhibition.

Lindbergh Perfects New Mechanical Heart; Goal Long Sought by Doctors

Enables Surgeons to Keep Human Organs Alive Long Time

New York, June 22—(AP)—The mechanical genius of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, switched to science, inaugurates a new cycle in medical progress announced Friday.

He has perfected a new mechanical heart and lungs at the Rockefeller Institute, where he has been working several years in seclusion of his own choosing.

It enables surgeons to remove a whole organ, such as kidneys, heart, spleen or glands from an animal's body, and keep it alive indefinitely, growing independently, in an artificial chamber.

Revives Organs
The mechanical heart furnishes artificial blood. It revives organs an hour after death of the animal from which they came.

This reaches a goal medicine has sought 123 years. The goal is to make whole parts of the body live in glass chambers where scientists could see them and learn at first hand how they fight disease and how they secrete the sinews of health.

Heretofore the handicap has been that the removed organs died—their caught bacterial infections just like a person. Lindbergh's new apparatus has wiped out the infections.

His part of the contribution is the mechanical side. He teamed with Dr. Alexis Carrel, and with him signed the announcement made in Science magazine. Dr. Carrel won the Nobel prize for achievements in keeping tissues alive outside the body.

26 Experiments
To date 26 experiments have been made. They include kidneys, spleen, heart, thyroid gland, ovaries and suprarenal glands. In only two did infection develop, and that was in the organ before removal. Thyroid glands were kept more than 20 days with pulsating arteries and active circulation.

With the organs were removed enough surrounding tissues and arteries to enable them to function. Ovaries and thyroids grew rapidly in their artificial boxes. One ovary developed signs associated with pregnancy.

The Treasury Department has announced that 358,269,353 coins of all denominations, exclusive of gold coins, were turned out last year to a total value of approximately $36,000,000.

Science Scores Anew Against Crime, But—

Science has dealt a new blow to the underworld. Using the minute quantity of salt present in the delicate film left when the hands or fingers touch any surface, Dr. E. M. Hudson, of the New York Police Department, who found 500 prints on the Lindbergh kidnap ladder, has developed a method of bringing to the light prints left on cloth, a hitherto impossible feat. Here he shows how it's done; the cloth first is run through a wringer, then dipped into a tray of silver nitrate and the salt in the print, becomes silver chloride, which turns black on exposure to light (top); the print becomes permanently visible (below) after being passed through another chemical bath.

Underworld Hits Back!

While science devises ways to curb crime, the underworld acquires deadly devices like this combination pistol and brass knuckles. The middle fingers go through the loops, between which is the pistol barrel. The bar projecting from the opposite side is the trigger, and rests against the palm of the hand. The weapon was found on a gangster seized in Charleston, S. C.

Horses and Mules, 447; value $15,325.

Sheep and goats, 779; value $2,875.

Carthage Homecoming

The following interesting item will be read with much interest, by many in both Ogle and Lee counties. Carthage is just "over the line" between Lee and Ogle counties. The people of that community for years have made this place their trading town, mostly and a number of the families who have retired from active life have moved this place. Any item concerning Carthage and Lighthouse are of interest to the people of this community.

"Let us now praise famous men—Men of little showing.

For their work continueth. And their work continueth. Broad and deep continueth. Greater than their knowing."

Bless and praise we famous men—Mess of little showing.

For their work continueth. And their work continueth. Broad and deep continueth. Great beyond their knowing."

Ninety years ago, "Spring of 1845" the Paxton Sanford and Levi Churchill families came to Illinois from Ohio. They bought land and laid out the village of Carthage, not knowing there was another town by the same name in Hancock county. Those who have access to a copy of the "Standard Atlas of Ogle county" will find the plot of this village on page 29. Few realize that in going to the Harry Bennett home they are travelling Franklin street, while the street one block east of the school was to have been Lafayette street. The street north of the school grounds was Church street and that on the south was Walnut street.

The Sanfords "hailed lumber with an ox team from Chicago and built a blacksmith shop on the highway northwest of the school ground, while Mr. Churchill built a hotel one block east—not long after this the first Carthage School house was built."

The village of Carthage never grew to any great size. A blacksmith shop was run in turn by Paxton Sanford, Bill Cole, Ben Elliott, Hans Ertsoe (a Dane from Lee County), Ehme Brass, and Alton Perry. The wagon maker for many years was "Dick" Capes. A general store in what was originally intended by Mr. Churchill for a hotel was kept by Joel Frost and later by Dexter Stocking, who went to California in 1863, when the stock was purchased by Joseph Stevens. When George Brown came from Ireland in 1852 Rathbone Bly was keeping store in another building across the Highway north from the blacksmith shop. John Westover, a tinner who made his wares during the winter and peddled them during the summer months, built what is now the Charles Fruit place. He also sold a few groceries and had a small line of boots and shoes as did most merchants of the early days.

Before the railroad came to Oregon, daily mail came to Taylor Post Office (village of Carthage) from Franklin Grove, the route being from Franklin Grove to Oregon. "Strong" Marshall and carriers. With Sears were early mail carriers. After the railroads came to Oregon there was tri-weekly mail to Taylor. Carriers in those days were Samuel Law, James Gates, and David Edmonds. The post office was in the Stevens store as long as that was in existence. Mrs. Harriet Haverly, Miss Mollie Anderson, and Mrs. Cyrus Hills were consecutive Post Mistress, until the first rural route was established in Ogle Co.

Dr. James Miles, the village physician, lived in an old stone house facing the north on the lot south of the Westover place. Later this building was used for a stable and the Miles family moved into a frame house on the same square but farther east.

The religious and social life of the community was kept alive through the monthly preaching services, weekly Sunday school, protracted meetings and spelling, singing and writing schools. "It was in spelling that Carthage went to the front" writes one former pupil. Parties for the young people and "donations for the preacher" were frequent.

The education of the children of Carthage community was of utmost importance from its earliest days. Although records are incomplete before 1875, we know such persons as Sarah Edmonds (Mrs. James Nettleton), Joseph Myer, Amelia Arnold (Mrs. Moses Bissell) and Alba Sanford taught in the Old Red School which stood west of the present building. Alba Sanford "probably taught in both houses." Others who taught between 1860 and 1875 were a Mr. Christy, Stewart Moore, Elizabeth Edmonds (Mrs. Webster Smith), Washington Sanford, Nancy Ellen Tilton (Mrs. Thomas Ormer), Henry Harrington, Liberty Walkup, Melissa Arnold (Mrs. William Hunt) Minerva E. Ballard (Mrs. Addison Clark), Annis Nettleton, Charles A. Ostrander, Miss Brooks, Nellie Stocking (Mrs. Henry Miller), Ada Sutherland (Mrs. Johnson Earl), Westana Glenn (Mrs. A. W. Rosecrans), Nellie Boyd (Mrs. Herman Fox), and John Taylor. Of this number Mrs. Hunt of Ashton, Mrs. Miller of St. Charles, Mrs. Fox of Oregon, and John Taylor of Modesto, Calif. are living. (Dates and other names for this period will be greatly appreciated. Etha Thompson, teacher, Oregon, Ill.)

Miss Sarah Edmonds was Mrs. Hunt's first teacher. Mrs. Hunt having gone to her when she was four years old. From this fact we deduce that Miss Edmonds taught in 1853, making her the first Carthage teacher of whom we have any record. In a similar way we arrive at Miss Amelia Arnold's teaching date as 1857. Fernando Sanford having started school to her when only three years old.

"Civil War Meetings were held in the school house. Alba Sanford played the snare drum while the boys enlisted for service." "On Saturdays the men who had not yet enlisted met on the school ground to drill on the east side of the school house, under the command of Dexter Stocking, who had been a soldier in the Mexican War. John Rancier made him a wooden sword. When Dexter Stocking went to California in 1863, the sword was given to Fernando Sanford, who still has it. Soon there were few left to drill. In 1863 the census gave nine men subject to military duty in Taylor Township. The township was called upon to raise six more men for the service, most of them were boys under legal military age." Quoting from Fernando Sanford, "I remember our nearest neighbor boy, Johnny Mossgrrove, coming to school to tell us good-bye and to show his new uniform, and then starting on a run across the field to catch the train at Franklin Grove. Johnny was fifteen years old. Some of the Carthage men and boys failed to return, among them were Rathbone Bly and Jim Davis who died at Perryville and William Arnold, a general favorite, who was shot while a prisoner."

"Following the Civil War, the Illinois Legislature passed a law permitting all boys over twenty-one, who entered that war under the age of twenty-one, to attend school for the length of time they served their country." That winter about eighty pupils enrolled at Carthage. "Liberty Walkup, himself a returned soldier, and Melissa Arnold (Mrs. William Hunt), his assistant, were the teachers."

Since 1875 the Registrars record the following teachers: M. M. Alden; Nettie Mater (Mrs. Jeanette Wagner, Kingman, Kansas); J. E. Hammond Ruth A. Brownell; Lillie E. Earl, Pomona, Calif.; Lucille Sanford (Mrs. George Coakley); F. A. Parker Ellen A. Ray, Elmer Sanford Rose Canfield (Mrs. Henry Ling); S. L. Hanger, Byron, Ill.; Nettie Malarky (Mrs. J. M. Letters were received from many who were unable to attend; among them were greetings from Merritt Taylor, Ceres, Calif., Judge James Fremont, Sanford, Colorado Springs, Colorado; and Prof. Fernando Sanford, Palo Alto, Calif. By some strange coincidence the date of this year's Homecoming was the same as the anniversary of the wedding of Charles A. Ostrander and Althea Brown. Mr. Ostrander taught Carthage school two different times during the late 1860's and early 1870's. We were fortunate in having so many of the Ostrander daughters, sons and grandchildren at the picnic—several of whom were from Brownsville and Austin, Texas. The town of Ostrander, Minn., was named for C. A. Ostrander, who gave the land for the station when the railroad was built through his land—years after he left Carthage. Mrs. Edith Wedler and Mrs. Grace Colton were present, honoring the memory of their father, Lyman Birdsall, and Uncle Liberty Walkup, both former teachers before 1875.

"How many have chased deluding phantoms through the fervid noontide of life, only to find, as evening shadows drew around them that Ambition had no goal. Achievement no triumph, to equal the calm, perennial joys of an humble rural home!"—by Horace Greeley, found on page 303 of Sanders Fourth Reader used at Carthage for many years.

Freeporter Killed in Chicago Accident

Chicago, June 22.—(AP)—Harry A. Huber, 40, of Freeport, Ill., was killed and two companions were injured early Friday when their automobile struck a safety island on South Parkway at East 46th street.

George Avenarius, 35, of Freeport, said to be owner of the automobile, received a fractured skull and H. G. Smith, 33, of Springfield, Ill., the driver, suffered internal injuries and severe cuts. Both were reported in a critical condition at a Chicago hospital.

Witnesses told the police that the automobile, being driven south, apparently went out of control as it neared the concrete safety island.

YALE'S CREWS IN CLEAN SWEEP OF YEARLY REGATTA

Eli's Varsity Defeated
Harvard by Fifteen
Lengths This Morn

New London, Conn., June 22.—(AP)—Yale's varsity crew trounced Harvard by more than fifteen lengths in their 73rd annual boat race on the Thames today.

Almost from the start, it was apparent that the Crimson had no chance. Yale jumped into the lead in the first 100 feet and rowing a magnificent race simply walked away from Harvard. At the submarine base, the half way mark, the Blue enjoyed a lead of a good five lengths and it was a procession from then on.

The times, unofficially, were 20:19 for Yale and 21:04 for Harvard. The varsity triumph, gained over a four mile upstream course, gave Yale a clean sweep of the 1935 regatta. The Eli freshmen and Javes scored narrow victories over Harvard representatives in the two preliminary races yesterday. The varsity event was postponed until today because of rough water.

Took Lead at Once
The crews made an even start but Yale pulled into a slight lead by the time the two shells had gotten 100 feet away from the bridge. The Elis were rowing smoothly and powerfully while Harvard was splashing somewhat.

Without apparent effort, the Blue shot past the half mile mark a quarter length in front and seemed to be gaining slowly but steadily on a Crimson boat that still was doing considerable splashing.

There was no change in their relative positions as they dug in a mile and a half from the start and a half mile from the submarine base which marks the half way point of the race.

As they reached the submarine base, Yale had stepped up its beat and was pulling away steadily. As they passed the two mile mark, Yale, rowing at a much faster beat, held a three lengths lead.

With every stroke the Eli boat forged further and further in front. The Blue's advantage at the 2½ mile mark was at least six lengths. With little more than a mile to go it looked like "no contest" for Harvard was dropping back steadily. Yale was developing tremendous power and the Crimson could not match it.

The Elis still led by at least six lengths as they went over the three mile mark. Stepping up the beat again, Yale was running away from the Crimson all the way down the final mile. The Elis, smooth and powerful even at a terrifically high beat, simply walked away from their rivals. Harvard, splashing badly, stuck doggedly to its hopeless task.

DAILY HEALTH

HEAT CRAMPS

The condition called heat cramps is one of water intoxication. This condition at times affects workmen who exert much physical effort, who perspire freely and who in consequence drink large quantities of water.

Again, it is sometimes witnessed in individuals who are exposed to high temperatures—steel workers, stokers, boiler tenders, etc.—and who in consequence perspire freely and therefore drink large amounts of water.

Individuals so affected complain of severe muscular cramps, headache, dizziness, weakness, palpitation, nausea and inward nervousness. It has been found that so called heat cramps can be prevented and relieved by the intake of small quantities of ordinary table salt or by drinking salt water.

Recent experimental work on animals revealed that drinking too much water will produce the symptoms described above.

Apparently the system becomes literally drowned in water, for we find that at first the kidneys tend to eliminate much of the water gaining access to the body tissues. Later, however, the kidneys "fall behind" in elimination and at that point the symptoms characteristic of water intoxication begin to develop.

When the salt content of the body is studied in water intoxication it is found that there is a marked loss in the salt content of the body as a whole, and particularly in certain tissues.

The significance of this observation and its practical utilization lies in those instances where a forcing of fluid intake is desirable, as, for example, in the case of fever diseases.

When the patient under forced fluid treatment develops irritability, headache and weakness, the water

ROMAN SOLDIER MAINTAINED AS DERBY FAVORITE

Meets Crack 3-Year-Olds in Feature at Washington Park

BULLETIN

Chicago, June 22.—(AP)—The field for the $25,000 added American Derby was reduced from 13 to 10 today with the scratching of Whopper, Ann O'Riley and Firethorn. The weather was clear and warm.

Chicago, June 22.—(AP)—Roman Soldier, bargain horse of the American turf, was after another $25,000 prize today.

The game little black three year old has been installed as favorite to triumph in the $25,000 added American Derby at a mile and a quarter at Washington park this afternoon. If victorious, the son of Cohort-Miamba will be back in the running for the three year old championship of 1935, as a challenger to Omaha.

With prospects for fair weather, a crowd of 25,000 spectators will go to the Derby and line the rails to see Roman Soldier attempt to beat back the most fashionable field that has tried for the rich prize since the race was revived in 1926. The field of four fillies and nine colts included nearly all the outstanding three year olds of the nation with the exception of Omaha, winner of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

The field of 13 original starters may be reduced to ten before post time around 4 P. M. (Central Standard time), because of track conditions. Indications were that the racing strip would be slow due to recent heavy rains.

Roman Soldier, victorious in six out of ten starts this year, and never out of the money, probably will go to the post a 7 to 5 favorite with Col. Edward R. Bradley's great fillies, Black Helen and Bloodroot, as second choice at 5 to 2.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KATHARINE STYKHURST, 20 and beautiful, allows her emotions to rule when she marries MICHAEL HEATHERSON, young riding instructor who comes into a title and fortune. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother is snobbish.

The night following his marriage Michael is injured in a traffic accident and when he regains consciousness his memory is impaired. He forgets the marriage. Katharine, heart-broken, believes he has deserted her. She goes to New Mexico with a friend, starting secret annulment proceedings meantime.

SALLY MOON, who has snared Michael into a sort of engagement, unaware of his marriage to Katharine, makes plans for a wedding. During a rehearsal of the ceremony Michael's memory returns. He tries to explain to Sally and her father what has happened. Both are furious and threaten trouble.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIX

THE headlights of Stanley Merriker's car, cutting through the mist, picked out the figure of a man against the stone wall. Violet put her hand over her mouth to stifle an exclamation of terror, purely involuntary. This was a lonely place. They had been told so, early and often, by many of their friends, but they had never before seen loiterers about.

Stanley pulled into the driveway and opened the door at his left. The man came toward them briskly. Violet saw it was Michael.

She introduced the two men briefly.

"May I talk to you for a moment?" Michael asked. He added that he knew it was late, but the matter was urgent.

"Of course," Violet led the way into the chintz-hung sitting room, switching on lights as she went. Stanley, with a muttered excuse, left them together.

"You know where Katharine is?" Michael made it more of a statement than a question. Violet glanced at him uneasily. Really, she thought, this was a difficult spot to be in. She knew the girl had left Innick to forget him. Only this afternoon she had heard that he was to be married to Sally Moon very shortly. What was she to do?

"I called her house. Her stepmother hung up on me," Michael explained gravely. Violet, as always, felt a little thrill of anger toward Bertine. So much of this mischief could be laid at her door. That thoroughly amug, good woman . . .

"Katharine asked me not to give out her address," Violet said, frowning for time. If Stan would only come back into the room; she badly needed his moral support at the moment! She had liked this boy at first. There was something appealing about his lean fitness, the way his eyes were set deeply in his sunken face. And the hand that held the cigarette was a good one, strong and well-muscled, the fingers slender and nervous. But you couldn't tell much about a person by looking at his face and hands. It was nonsense to say you could.

"Good Lord," blurted Michael, in the silence. "She's my wife—didn't you know that? I thought, perhaps she'd told you."

Violet stared, stung into speech by the direct attack. "She did. But you didn't acknowledge it. She thought you had played a ghastly trick on her."

"That's why she left?"

"Mainly," Violet said rather angrily. The man was either a con summate actor or else he was sincere. But when she had told Stanley and Adrian her theory of his possible loss of memory, a week or two before, they had laughed at her. Adrian was preparing the annulment papers at the moment.

"She must think me a thorough rotter," Michael groaned.

"I'm afraid she does," Mon, Violet reflected, ought to pay a little for their treatment of women.

HE looked at her. "I didn't remember a thing," he told her simply. "You knew—and didn't she hear it?"—that I was hurt in a taxi accident?"

"We did. But it didn't sound serious. She called the hospital and was told you were getting on all right. Then you came home, and neither telephoned nor tried to see her. One day you passed her on the street without speaking."

"I did?"

"You did," Violet said, steeling herself against the impulse to comfort the boy. He put his hand into his hands and groaned. Stanley came back into the room.

"We were going through a rehearsal tonight," Michael went on, glancing from one to the other. "I was to marry Sally Moon. Someone said the words of the ceremony—more as a joke than anything. I felt as though I'd been struck by lightning. The whole thing came back to me."

Violet looked accusingly at her husband. "I told you so!"

"Lucky it happened in time," Stanley drawled. "You'd have been in a pretty fix."

"Do you think I don't realize it?" Michael wanted to know. "I meant that night I went to New York to have the whole matter of the inheritance straightened out and to announce our marriage at once. My engagement to Sally had been a crazy affair; she didn't really want it. It was just an impulse on Sally's part. But afterward—"

"She liked the idea of the title, eh?" the older man grinned encouragingly.

"That was about it."

"Well, thank God, it's no worse than it is," murmured Violet philosophically. "Katharine has been hurt—but not permanently, I hope. Whether or not she'll want to let the marriage stand, of course, is another matter."

Stanley, halting over the words, told Michael that legal steps were already being taken to dissolve the bond.

He paled. "Sorry she did it, eh?"

"You can't blame her for having a second thought on it," Violet cried, coming to her friend's defense. "You scarcely made it a success at the start—although I admit now that it wasn't your fault."

He stared at them both. "Well, I'll be pushing along. Thanks for bothering with me."

Violet's ready pity went out to him. He looked so young and troubled! Her woman's perceptions told her what a wretched time he must have gone through the whole, preposterous story. It was too fantastic not to be true.

"Katharine's at Silencia, a sort of hotel at Roanoke, New Mexico," she blurted out on an impulse.

"Thank you." He wrote it down. After he had gone Stanley said gravely to his wife, "I don't think you should have told him where she is. It may make trouble. We don't want to meddle."

Violet concealed her own grave misgivings at this breach of confidence. "I'll take all the blame, if there is any," she told her husband. "I couldn't see him go off like that. He looked so wild—so desperate. I wouldn't have slept tonight . . ."

A YOUNG man in worn tweeds, carrying a shabby bag, boarded a west-bound train at Pennsylvania station that night. He stayed up rather late in the writing room. Two of his notes were posted at Manhattan Transfer. One was to Mrs. Stanley Merriker, the other to Miss Sally Moon of Innick, New York.

Then he went to bed and tossed uneasily in the narrow Pullman.

In Chicago he decided to take a plane for the rest of the journey. No passenger ships had left New York the night before because of bad weather conditions. But the rain and blowing cold fogs had been left behind in Ohio.

Michael had never been in a plane before. Below him the familiar country spread out like a checkerboard. He drew a long breath, stretching his legs in the cramped seat. It was good to have this sense of spaciousness again . . .

In Santa Fe he left the ship. There was a jerkwater train to Roanoke or there were cars to be had. It was a matter of 50 miles. Michael burned with impatience. The train was not due to leave for an hour.

He jingled the coins in his pockets as the driver of a rackety-looking sedan came around the corner. Yes, he would drive Michael to Roanoke; no trouble at all. Silencia? Certainly, he was well acquainted with the place. A beautiful spot. The gentleman would enjoy it.

THE roads left something to be desired. In places they were deeply rutted. It was a short route they were taking, the driver indignantly explained.

Michael raged at the stops. The engine was an old one; more than once the radiator had to be reinforced by water which Sebastian carried in a tin kerosene can off the front seat. The day grew very hot—unbearably hot.

Michael knew the very words he would say to the fair-haired girl he was seeking. He could scarcely believe that she had been, for an instant one day, his wife in the eyes of God and the law. He had forgotten, if ever he had known it, that life could be so good.

This fellow probably was riding him all over God-knew-where to collect a fare . . . Michael fumed at the thousand and one delays.

But at long last, the single narrow street of Roanoke loomed up out of the desert. And half a mile out of town they saw the creamy walls of a long, low adobe house.

"Silencia, my gentleman," said Sebastian with a flash of white teeth. Michael's heart thudded impatiently.

The brothers Stunkle, Maurice and Bernard, the latter a junior in the Steward high school in which vicinity the boys reside, together with Fred "Killer" Hess, of Woosung, topped the boxing show at the Dixon Airport hangar last evening, all winning their bouts by decided margin. Bernard Stunkle who appeared in the principal bout, meeting Andrew Madena of Peoria in the 120 pound class punched out one of the best fights and victories in his career in five rounds of fast action. For the first three rounds honors were quite even, with Bernard having a shade the better of the blows, but he increased this lead in the two closing sessions to win easily.

His brother Maurice met a newcomer in the local ring, Hugh Senneff of Chadwick, who proved somewhat of a puzzle. Senneff did not show much in the first round when Stunkle chased him about the ring, but in the second round the Steward boxer went to the mat when Senneff landed a low blow and was warned by Referee Joe Sharkey. Stunkle stopped two low punches in this bout and in the third easily punched out a win, scoring a technical knockout when Representative Kelly of the state boxing commission waved Senneff to his corner.

Hess Defeated Clow
Fred "Killer" Hess of Woosung settled down to business at the outset of his bout with Johnny Nelson of Peoria. The latter clowned a good bit throughout the three rounds and kept the crowd in an uproar, occasionally landing a telling punch, but all the time Hess was hammering away, taking the affair more seriously and easily won another decision to his already long list of wins.

Harry Kobbeman, the Prophets-town heavyweight was paired up with Jesse Penon of Peoria, a colored boxer. Kobbeman was the favorite from the start and was never in danger as he pounded out another decision.

Eddie Martinis of DePue punched Johnny Allen, colored 135 pound fighter of Peoria around the ring for three rounds to win a decision.

Scored Knockout
Dixie Caudle of DeKalb who made his first appearance two weeks ago, scored a knockout over Slacky Novak of Peru after boxing but two minutes of the first round in their meeting.

Duffy Giberson of Peoria was awarded the judge's decision in the opening match with Hugh Duffy of Davis Junction in the 116 pound division.

The Dixon Athletic Association, sponsors of the program last evening, announced a match had been

Johnson Leads American National Batters

New York, June 22.—(AP)—Bob Johnson was left as the lone upholder of the Athletics' batting supremacy in the American League today after the rise of Washington and Cleveland clouters during the past week had shoved his teammates out of the picture. His own batting average wasn't anything like it was a couple of weeks ago.

During the week which ended with yesterday's games as he hit safely only seven times in 25 trips to the plate, dropping from .382 to .370. That made his total loss for the past two weeks 36 points. Meanwhile George "Mule" Haas, a former Philadelphia now wearing Chicago livery, regained his rating as a "regular" by passing this week's minimum of 125 times at bat and slipped into second place, vacated by Wally Moses of the A's.

Arky Vaughan, National League leader, was kept idle all week by a charley horse but none of his rivals approached his .400 average. Joe Medwick just maintained his .356 mark with eight hits in 22 times up while Pepper Martin dropped one point to .336.

ROWE SHOWS OLD FORM AFTER SON BRIGHTENS HOME

As Result Tigers Look More Like Team They Were Last Season

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer
If the Detroit Tigers recapture the American League pennant this season it apparently wouldn't be amiss for them to vote a share of the world series proceeds to Lynwood Rowe, Junior.

One of the difficulties that beset Manager Mickey Cochrane this spring was that Lynwood Rowe, senior—the famous "Schoolboy"—wasn't pitching according to last year's form and couldn't be persuaded to take the business of throwing the ball over the plate seriously.

But since a son and heir appeared some ten days ago it seems to be a different Rowe out there on the hill, bearing down all the time and that has made a world of difference to the Tigers. He followed up a three-hit flinging performance against the Red Sox, which might have been dismissed as natural jubilation by limiting the Athletics to six blows and yesterday by shutting out the league leading Yankees with four puny singles to gain a 7 to 9 triumph.

Close in on Sox
That victory, despite three straight losses to the Yanks, put Detroit only a game and a half behind the White Sox and Indians, who wound up in a virtual tie for second place.

Chicago moved back into second place with a 5 to 3 victory over the Athletics behind young Vernon Kennedy's seven-hit pitching even though Jimmie Foxx belted his 13th homer for the A's. Cleveland's game with Washington was rained out as was the greater part of the Boston-St. Louis twin bill. With Lefty Grove in form and Carl Reynolds and Mel Almada hitting homers, the Red Sox pulled out a 3-0 decision in six innings that were played before the storm struck.

Giants Hash Rivals

The Giants, having disposed of the St. Louis threat, continued to make hash of their rivals for the National League lead by thumping the Pirates for the second time, 11 to 4. They settled the game as early as the second inning when Mel Ott's 13th homer, made with two aboard, climaxed a seven run rally off Red Lucas.

The cards took an 8 to 3 beating from the Phillies on the strength of Syl Johnson's six-hit elbowing and a homer by Johnny Vergez with the bases full. As a result New York's lead was stretched to 7½ games over the Bucs.

The Cubs continued to improve their fourth position by bowling over the Braves 11 to 3 with an 18 hit attack that more than offset homers by Wally Berger and Frank Hogan off Tex Carleton's delivery. Don Brennan of the Reds, winning his first game of the season, made the Dodgers look more than even like "hitless wonders" when he shut them out with seven hits to win 2 to 0 with the aid of Ernie Lombardi's circuit swat with two aboard.
